

How to Write a Letter to the Editor

Here are the steps you'll need to write an impactful letter to the editor in support of increased federal library funding!

Below is a general structure you can use to help you craft a letter to the editor.

Below is a general structure you can use to help you craft a letter to the editor.

1. INTRODUCE THE ISSUE.

State why you are writing the letter. If you are responding to what someone else has written, directly address that article or letter.

EXAMPLE: As our lives continue to reel from the pandemic, one institution that has stood by our community is

2. USE LOCAL STATISTICS AND/OR EXAMPLES.

State the facts using statistics, preferably local. If you do not have statistics, cite a local story.

EXAMPLE: Library staff at _____ have never stopped working for our community during this crisis, whether their doors have been open or closed. Since the start of the pandemic, libraries have served people hit hardest by the pandemic: people who've lost jobs, learners of all ages, people without internet access, and everyone who relies on digital resources for entertainment while sheltering at home. For example, _____ provided _____ to families with school children and registered hundreds of patrons for vaccines. Our libraries keep our community strong; to keep our libraries strong, we need to continue federal funding for them.

3. CLOSE WITH A CALL TO ACTION. □

Reaffirm the main point, or offer a solution to the problem.

EXAMPLE: The federal Library Services & Technology Act (LSTA), along with the Innovative Approaches to Literacy (IAL) program, are critical sources of support for our libraries, and it's vital

4. AMPLIFY THE MESSAGE. □

Once your letter gets published, spread the news as broadly as possible!

- You can multiply the impact of your letter by sharing it on social media. Tweet it directly at your representative and senators, thanking them or urging them to support libraries. The Twitter handles of your decision-makers can be found on the ALA's Fund Libraries Campaign webpage.

Ask your friends and fellow library supporters to respond to the letter by commenting online.

- If you want to see more coverage of libraries and the services they provide to your community, show the news outlet that their readers care. Content that elicits a substantial response from readers will become a higher priority for news editors, who decide on what issues to cover.

If you don't use social media, email your letter directly to your elected leaders.

- Include a short note that reinforces your message, encouraging your leaders' continued support for libraries, or urging them to make libraries a priority in federal spending decisions. Check to see whether or not your leaders have previously supported library funding.
