and to our sister organifiations the Association of Research Libraries, the Special Libraries Association, and the American Association of Law Libraries, as well as to Sufianne Sears, the chair of Depository Library Council, and to ¡udy Russell, Dean of Libraries at the University of §lorida and chair of the Association of Southeastern Research Libraries (AS›RL) Deans' §DLP Task §orce. A robust and sustainable §DLP is in the interest of all stakeholders, and I hope to broaden the conversation to include as many interests and perspectives as possible in our discussions.

T at's all for now. In my next column, I will return to a more detailed discussion of the strategic plan. In the 窗ī愛uS0
