The focus on this session will be to identify the changing trends and issues affecting youth services and identifying possible collaborative partners.	get your library noticed. There was a program in 2003 about library and community partnerships, in 2006 about how to create and sustain partnerships that advocate for youth, and in 2008 on fostering youth advocacy.	better clarify what the program will be about. Is it an advocacy program? Something else? The title is adding to the ambiguity.

				involved. Was this really the topic of the 08 President's Program?
Teen Reader's Advisory 101- Booklists and Beyond	Cara Kinsey, Convener for YALSA's Readers' Advisory IG	Discover or rediscover the basics of reader's advisory for teens, from lists to list-servs, databases to blogs. Tips for knowing your collection, selling in the stacks, and connecting to collections beyond print.	This program does not support any of YALSA's booklists. Perhaps this would be a good online class?	The PC Committee may have misunderstood the focus of this session. This could have appeal.
Rave Reviews: YA Galley Groups Share Their Secrets for Getting Teen Book Reviews Published!	Carole Spann	YA Galley committee members will describe YA Galley program and Teens' Top Ten list, explaining how it works and its value for both teens who participate and YA publishers.	A similar program was presented in 2006, entitled, I Can Get my Teens to Review Anything. This would probably make a better article for YAttitudes or YALS at the time YALSA begins accepting YAGalley applications in the Spring of 2010.	A similar program was presented in 2006, entitled, I Can Get my Teens to Review Anything. Should be an article for YAttitudes.
Write What You Know: How to publish your ideas with YALSA	Heather Booth, Publications Committee Chair	Come learn how to start writing about your teen librarianship experiences from YALSA authors and editors.	in 2004 there was a program on publishing 101, understanding how the publishing business works, and a program on writing about teen services, and in 2007 there was a program on how to publish with YALSA. This would probably be a better article or blog post.	Use other channels to get the word out about this. Perhaps a podcast.
